Welfare, Insurance or Income?

The changes in unemployment surance reportedly being considred by the federal cabinet are yet mother flip-flop in the checkered hort life of Canada's revamped Inemployment Insurance Commision, whose mission changed radially when its legislation was reised extensively in 1970.

Two major changes are suposed to have been endorsed by Prime Minister Trudeau and the cabinet.

Both moves will certainly save Ottawa money — the aim of all the frantic cabinet meetings and irgent conferences now going on in the capital - and nobody would onto different levels of governrgue against any reasonable ways and means of bringing under control (let alone reducing) the huge and unwieldy expenditures of the UIC, heading for a $4 billion budget this year, which is almost twice as much as it spent in 1974.

The changes mooted in the press this week and those already introduced as legislative amendments earlier in the year, are sensible. One of them will mean that, in practice, those who quit their jobs for no good reason will have to wait three months before getting their first unemployment insurance cheque. That should produce more second thoughts.

But it all seems such an expensive lesson for the Ottawa bureaucrats. Why should it have cost billions to find out what common sense should have told the UIC planners - that if you make it attractive enough to-quit work, then people will leave their jobs, collect unemployment insurance and go

The savings envisioned for Ottawa may be only illusory, however, if the moves to tighten up unemployment insurance merely succeed in shoving former insurance claimants onto the welfare rolls. And shoving the responsibility

The real proof will come if the changes force the casual jobless and quitters who make a profession of collecting unemployment insurance out into the job market instead of just across the street to the social assistance offices. If these people go on welfare instead of finding work, then Ottawa still must pay part of the cost - perhaps as much as it costs the federal administration now for the UIC.

A good part of the problem Ottawa now finds itself in regarding unemployment insurance seems to stem from a muddled confusion over the actual purpose of unemtive public mind as well as in government circles. Previous to the radical changes made in 1970 under the stewardship of then-Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey, it was unmistakably a scheme to tide over - barely - the unemployed between jobs.

But with Mackasey's sweeping reforms - which included generous sickness and maternity benefits, as well as regular benefits which some argue made unemployment an attractive, comfortable proposition - it seemed the plan was transformed into a kind of Trojan horse for the idea of a guaranteed annual income.

Only now, when the UIC budget has reached enormous proportions, have our leaders raised the cry: Beware of Greeks bearing gifts. The idea deserves a proper debate - not the brief airing it got in the 1968 federal election when Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield raised the subject. But setting up such an open-ended scheme as the present unemployment insurance plan - with inflation built into it - is not the way to do it. Before the billions are spent is the proper time for careful planning,

Then we have the Mutt and Jeff act of Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Donald Macdonald. The latter says the proposals are "frightening." There, almost completed, you come upon a 12-storey tower of reflecting glass, a delicate and infinitely graceful Crystal Palace that mirrors the patterns of the sky and of the buildings around and transforms them into magical, fanciful shapes.

Building it was a beautiful deed. It is a jewel among the mean, utilitarian cracker-boxes that litter this town. It's reason for being is also an utter scandal. Look hard at the glass and you'll see reflected quite another shape image of bureaucratic megalomania. The building belongs to the Bank of Gerald Bouey made a speech in which he appealed for "a sober appreciation by Canadians of the seriousness of our economic problems which will call forth sufficient will to co-operate in their solu-

Should one laugh, or cry? In six months' time, Bouey and his staff will move into that structure. It is the most expensive office building of its size in Canada. Also, because of the glass, the most costly to heat and to air condition. Also, the most ostentatious - linked to the office tower is a 12-storey-high, yearround garden enclosed in plain glass

Irresponsible, Hypocritical

Anger would be the wrong response You wouldn't be able to frame the right questions. How, for instance, could an institution charged by parliament to "control and protect the value of the national monetary unit" be so irresponsible, and so hypocritical? Did it not notice the contradiction? Did it notice and not care? Did it, as seems most likely, notice and assume it could get away with it? Assume, that is, that all the postal workers and stevedores and doctors and B.C. woodworkers and teachers and Mon treal policemen wouldn't notice?

The trouble with those questions is that they invite others. Has the entire government gone mad? Is it composed of cynics, shielded from reality by the conceit of power? Or of innocents playing let's-pretend games? Any and all descriptions fit. The central and the most terrifying fact about the bank's behaviour is that it has done nothing in the

> Why demand that the bank play the puritan and give up its year-round garden when the prime minister has given himself a year-round swimming pool?

The timing of the opening of the bank building is, of course, unfortunate. These things happen. It was unlucky that the MPs' pay increase coincided with the government's attempt last spring to persuade business and labor to accept price and income restraint. It doesn't, of course, though you can count on some dip-and-wing public relations gestures over the next couple of weeks to merchandise Trudeau's new economic package. What happened to the bank building illustrates what will happen. Bouey's predecessor, Louis Rasminsky, first proposed the project during the government's 1969-71 austerity period. He was told to wait, then given approval as soon as austerity ended. Rasminsky wanted a $75 million building. The cabinet cut him in half-not to economize but because Rasminsky planned to bring treasury board and finance into the complex and those departments wanted their own buildings.

Two Ton Money

In a system quite out of control it is unfair to pick on the bank-except as an example a little too blatant to stomach. The real reason for doing so is that when the building opens it will house an even better symbol of the absurd than the extravant structure itself.

As the centerpiece of its national numismatic collection, the bank will install a unique coin - a two-ton round stone from Yap Island in the Pacific. Cen turies ago the Yap Islanders used small, flat stones as currency and bored a hole in the center so they could be carried on a stick. Over the years - for reasons no-one knows - the stones grew larger. They became eventually too heavy to use as currency and turned into objects of

Last spring, three days after a visit y the Soviet military attache, a violent ampaign began to force out foreign ases there. Fake stories were planted in the press alleging that America, Britain and Israel were conspiring to prise Crete

Popular hostility was excited in an land which, because of its old Liberal U.S. residents of Crete have been urged

U.S. Ended by Pleasing

Cabinet ministers contend this trend is inspired by communists. It runs counter to government hopes to patch up relations with Washington and retain valid ties to NATO.

In relations between Washington and Athens the Greek government is ahead of the mood of the Greek people although it can't move further until the ugly Cyprus crisis is settled. The only foreign observers invited to recent manoeuvres in Thrace were American. U.S. Marine battalion held effective exercises last month in the Peloponnesus.

This government wants to maintain the closest links acceptable by public opinion with both the U.S. and NATO. But it feels it must avoid attacks from the leftist opposition and also from the Greek lobby in Washington whose understanding of political reality here is dis-withdrawal from the NATO military command structure but the chances diminish with each month of Cyprus tension. As a result there has been a proposal to NATO that Greece's allied relationship could be acknowledged under what is called a kind of "Norwegian

This implies that Greek forces should only be under Greek command except in wartime but that Greece would continue to participate in allied planning, air defence and infrastructure. However, the allied bases and troops if it can avoid doing so, whereas Norway harbors no foreign soldiers in peacetime.

No Idea How to Turn

There has also been some talk of Greece demanding replacement of NATO Secretary General Luns because he failed to honor Athens' request for an emergency meeting on the 1974 Turkish invasion of Cyprus and because he said America last month that Greece didn't object to ending the U.S. arms embargo on Turkey. Luns did not consult Greece on the latter statement

Yet such a dramatic demand is most unlikely. It is more probable this country will seek to keep quiet in NATO conclaves and avoid emphasizing its participation in every sense, even refraining from sending its defense minister to the next ministerial meeting.

While the government and armed forces wish to preserve alliance ties, they realize such a policy runs counter to present public emotionalism.

Thus there is an inherent contradiction these days between the situation here and in Turkey. Greece has a strong civilian government which dominates the military but is braked by popular preju-

Pigeons, Acorns Go Together

Watching a gang of Band-tailed Pigeons popping acorns the other day, I got to thinking that Garry Oaks are even more important to pigeons than they are to people - some people, at least.

Now and then a lonely bleat of despair is heard as some poor soul bemoans yet another withdrawal from our already depleted Garry Oak account. But, for the most part, these are voices in the wilderness, and the Garry Oaks keep disap-

Deciduous hardwoods like Garry Oaks either do not count for much in a land so well-endowed with evergreen soft woods, or they're just in the way.

But Garry Oaks are more than just your ordinary, run the-mill, deciduous hardwood; they're something special, even unique. They're British Columbia's only native oak and, more than that, they're only found in our little corner of the

On top of all this, they're a particularly majestic tree. Their great, gnarled trunks and grotesquely twisted limbs are peculiarly impressive in a land of symetrically, often monotonously, and sometimes even menacingly, tall trees.

But all this is lost on the pigeons. To them, the beginning and, more important, the end, of every Garry Oak is an acorn. When the waste grain and hemlock pollen of spring, the elderberries of early summer, the cascara and arbutus berries of late summer, and the dogwood seeds of autumn are finished, there's always - or almost always - the Garry

And from the way Band-tailed Pigeors go after acorns—popping then down whole, unshelled—they're worth waiting for. I'm even prepared to believe that were it not for Garry Oaks we might not have Band-tailed Pigeons.

Sure, the pigeons nest all the way up the coast as far as Terrace, all over Vancouver Island, and even on the Fraser as far island as Hope, while the oaks are found only on southeastern Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and at a few isolated spots on the Fraser Delta, but in the fall, those pigeons converge on the oaks. And when they've cleaned uphere they head south, harvesting Garry Oak seeds — they're called White Oak in the States — as far south as California.

Not every Garry Oak produces a bumper crop of acorns every year. The vagaries that are part of growing in nature mean that some years, in some parts of the country, the oaks fail. Which also means, in addition to no acorns, no Band-

For three autumns off and on I've watched those Garry Oaks from my kitchen window and for two autumns the pigeons have passed me by. This year the oaks are almost golden with acorns, and purple with pigeons.

The pigeons show up about daylight; spend an hour or so loosening up at the top of a big Douglas Fir and then turn to Dropping in small groups of 5 or 6, they land among the oak branches and, with stately strides, their golden-yellow spats glowing in the poor light, begin their gleaning.

* * * Each pigeon finds an appropriately endowed twig, byldozes its way to the end of the branch leans over, tentatively taps an acorn — I don't know why — and rejecting one — again I don't know why — turns to another. This time the tap gets the right answer, the acorn is plucked from its cup, held in the bird's beak for a moment and summarily swallowed,

Now a Band-tailed Pigeon is a big bird but a half-dozen fresh acorns, in the shell, probably taxes even their gastrointestinal resources for as soon as each has plucked its quota, off it flies back to the fir to preen and putter while the corns are reduced to manageable proportions.

Did I detect a rattle as they flew?

Northern Nuggets ·

By PAT BARCLAY

There's a persistent aura of romance connected with the Arctic, try as we southerners will to remove it. First of all there's the land itself, together with its indomitable climate. There's the awe-inspiring ability of the Eskimo to cope, despite the eroding effect of contact with southern civilization. ("If the Eskimo's not your friend, you're dead", a Baffin Island game of-ficer once told us. "He could lose you in a white-out just like that, and it'd be all over". He was referring to the time his own snowmobile had broken down dur-ing a blizzard and he and his wife spent 13 hours huddled in a snow dugout until their Eskimo guide managed to locate them.)

There are also the stories Arctic residents and trarhere are also the stories Archi restant and revellers have to tell, like the one we heard from a friend who worked at a weather station on Ellef Ringnes Island in the High Arctic, west of Ellesmere and Axel Heiberg Islands. (Ellef Ringnes, incidentally, is known as "the botanical North pole of the world" because it has the least vegetation of any northern lead mass. With no least vegetation of any northern lead mass. With no least vegetation of any inches of land mass. With no ice cover and about two inches of precipitation a year, it is a true desert.)

Animal life on Ellef Ringnes is as scarce as plant life, but our friend reports that he saw a few hares, a small herd of barren land caribou no bigger than sheep, and one lone white wolf. He estimates the wolf's height at three and a half feet, its weight at 125 to 150 pounds. Although it hovered in the vicinity of the weather station and frequently accompanied its inhabitants on their expeditions outside, the wolf never permitted any of them to approach closer than a distance of 75 feet. With one exception, One of the men had brought along a fine female husky and in time the two animals mated. The result was a litter of five lively pups. "When they were old enough", said our friend, "we sent them south to Resolute."

Now apart from that marvellous phrase "south to Resolute" (imagine Resolute being south of any-where!), this brief anecdote has much to offer the eptive listener. It is the kind of raw material of which memorable stories are made.

And if you read Farley Mowat's latest collection of stories, The Snow Walker, you'll see how such nuggets of information become absorbing fiction. (Or, as

Some of the pieces in The Snow Walker have appeared before, as "earlier versions" in such periodicals as the Saturday Evening Post, Maclean's and Holcals as the Saturday Evening Post, Maclean's and Hol-iday. Although no hint is given of when each story took its first shape, they are bound together across the lapse of time by Mowat's strongly-held biases and con-victions. These include admiration of the Eskimo's own codes of beliefs and behavior, scorn for whites who arrogantly impose their ways on others, contempt for modern man's worship of technology, and faith in a generous - when unmolested - Nature. Some stories, such as "Stranger in Taransay", are an attempt to provide an explanation for an incongruity. In this story a storm sweeps a kayak-paddling Eskimo miles from his home waters to wash up on a Hebridean shore. What happens to him then accounts for the presence of a group of delicate ivory carvings in a Scottish pub. Others provide explanations strange customs, as in "The Blood in Their Veins the story behind one Eskimo's annual visit, laden withgifts, to a barrern rock. Two stories describe unusual bonds -- between a man and a fox, between a dog and

One story, after which the book is titled, combines an indictment of a callous white trader and a saving message from the spirit world. Throughout the book Eskimo spiritual beliefs are shown to be well-founded. Do-gooding white priests, on the other hand, are cast as villains. As I recall, there are only two good white men in this section of Farley Mowat's Arctic; one of them is a Scot and the other is a native of Labrador with Entire blood.

Mowat's ready judgments tend to get in the way of his dramatic effects in The Snow Walker, for once we are given the opening gist of a story it is not difficult to predict its outcome. Sometimes, too, Mowat's prose bogs down in heavy sludge. ("How do we envisage snow? . . . It is the fragility of Christmas dreams sintening through a way dayleage, to the accompanient. tering through azure darkness to the accompaniment of the sound of sleigh bells . . . It is the invitation that glows ephemeral on a woman's lashes on a winter

Generally speaking, however, The Snow Walker is good, stirring entertainment. And one cannot help but share Mowat's respect for the Eskimo as he was and his pity for him as we have made him. "Southern greatest mistake with regard to the Eskimo may well have been the assumption that because people's technology is primitive, their morality and understanding must be, also. Beside Mowat's many wise and self-sacrificing Eskimo characters, his arro-

that everything in this book is based in fact — is simply—a device to give it verisimillitude, as the suspicious reader may conclude, it seems an odd waste of time.

That comes in abundance from the backdrop against which this story is told, the wealth of fascinating detail of the flowering of the Victorian age in mid-nineteenth-century England. As a setting for the bizarre crime it unfolds it provides such a rich accom-paniment that the reader may be as engrossed in the period as he is in the heist itself.

The system, still at the research stage, was demonstrated here at a conference on communications by optical fibres.

Telephone calls were carried on a beam of light along glass fibres. Tests by the post office have shown that up to 2.000 calls can be carried on each tiny strand and experts believe this can be increased to 200,000.

Post Office research teams, working with industry, say glass-fibre cables may replace wire in many parts of the telecommunications network. One big advantage of optical fibres is that signals may be transmitted over much greater distances without the need for intermediate signal booster stations.

Two systems are being evaluated. One can send 120 telephone calls at once-over single fibre sections without intermediate amplification. For longer distances, sections can be

The other system involves signals being sent along a half-mile fibre designed to handle nearly 2,000 calls. This has been installed in the normal cable ducts of a London building.

Sandown: Now Is Hour For The Racing Fan

The future is almost now for the Capital City Turf Club.

The future is almost now for the Capital City Turf Club. The bangtalls will be off and running at Sandown Park one week from yesterday and, if the weather holds, then local horsemen will have surmounted one of their biggest hurdles.

The return of thoroughbred racing to the Island after an absence of five years is the culmination of the efforts of some Victoria businessmen and horse owners who were disturbed at the thought that Victoria was being left out in the cold by the B.C. Jockey Club when racing at Sandown was discontinued after the 1970 season. ued after the 1970 season.

It was the opinion then of Jack Diamond, president of the It was the opinion then of Jack Diamond, president of the B.C. Jockey Club, that it simply wasn't economical to continue with a fall meet here when the jockey club was enjoying such success on the mainland, and, with an improved ferry service, there was no reason Victoria people interested in the sport of kings couldn't get their favorite entertainment at Exhibition Park. Further, the meets at Sandown hadn't been a finencial bonary. So why return?

been a financial bonanza. So why return?

On the other hand, some city owners, notably George Harknett and Ed Popham, at first, were eager and anxious not to be forgotten even though Harknett readily admitted that he could make more money racing his stock at Exhibi-

And so, a move was initiated to get others interested and then apply to the B.C. Racing Commission for dates. This was finalized this summer, the commission giving approval for a 16-day meeting and Diamond leasing the premis Sandown to the local group. Since then improvements have been made to the grandstand and other facilities at the track. A budget of $30,000 was set aside for the purpose and the area from the grandstand and also roofing over previous un covered portions of the grandstand.

tent that it is considered feasible that Sandown now has the capability of a daily mutuel handle of between $150-$160,000. The previous high at Sandown was in 1967 when the daily average was $116,000. Harry Filion, publicity director of the B.C. Jockey Club, who has been retained in a similar capac ity here, says he sees no reason why the mutuel handle shouldn't be adequate to conduct a successful meeting as wagering in Vancouver has been up every year since the 1970 season and Exhibition Park this year has set all sorts of new

An innovation by the CCTC will be feature or exotic-type betting on all races. This will take the form of Exactor wagering on the first and last races each day with Quinellas on all the other races. It is not known how city fans will react to this format, but at least it is based on the premise that one they might have a better chance "to win a bundle"

Since the 16-day meeting was announced the CCTC has had nothing but co-operation from horsemen and owners. The list of horses announced as probables the other day is a better class of thoroughbred on the whole than in any other meeting held here previously. In addition, Filion dropped the word this week that the jockeys coming are among the Exhibition Park regulars — Alan Cuthbertson, Jim Arnold, Gart Carter, Danny Sanchez, to name a few — and if there are any problems, he hasn't encountered them as yet.

The basic format includes a 1 p.m. first post time each day with eight races on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and nine on Saturday. Featured events include the Colonist Handicap, Oct. 18; the Times Handicap, Oct. 25; The Vancouver Island Derby, Nov. 1, The Royal Oak Handicap, Nov. 8; and the Vancouver Island Championship on the final day, Nov. 11.

So there it is. Many Victorians have long been clamoring to have horse racing return. Now it is here. Harknett said "There is no question it couldn't be made a success. CCTC who have entered into this pilgrimage, right.

And they do deserve the support they believe they will

Last season's great getaway in the Western Canada Hockey League may be the reason for Victoria Cougars' slower takeoff this season?

Psychologically speaking, the Prairie teams are ready and waiting for the Cougars.

The Cougars suffered their third straight one-goal loss

The Pats had lost their first two games but, obviously, were ready for the Pat Ginnell-coached Cougars.

So, too, were Calgary Centennials and Medicine Hat Tigers: Both were winless until the Cougars rolled into their rinks this week. Calgary (0-4) shaded the Cougars 6-3 and the Tigers (0-2) took a 4-3

Even so, Cougars are no worse than everybody else in the Western Division, with the exception of New Westminster Bruins. Despite a 7-5 loss Friday to Saskatoon Blades in Saskatoon, the Bruins have a four-point lead atop the standings. The rest of the teams

Cougars were done in Friday by Gerry Minor, who scored from a wild scramble with 65 seconds remaining to break a 3-3 deadlock. Cougars took the lead three

SS Mariposa SS Monterey Jan. 2, Feb. 10, Mar. 13*

This winter leave winter at home along with all the fuss of life on land. Escape to the sunny South Seas with the friendly Americans.

You'll cruise 15,000 miles of the beautiful Pacific, surrounded by an ocean of peace and contentment. Visit ports of call that read from the pages of Captain Cook's log: Moorea, Tahiti, Rarotonga. New Zealand. Australia. Fiji, Niuafo'ou, Pago Pago. And Hawaii.

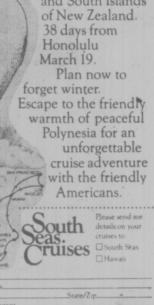

And best of all, you'll enjoy a sea life made famous by sister ships over 90 years ago. One that today has become the hallmark of luxury cruising in the Pacific.

The SS Mariposá and SS Monterey are renowned for their friendly hometown hospitality, Aloha spirit and crew, plus the kind of cuisine, service, accommodations and entertainment Americans love best. Registered in the United States, these famous ships are small enough to offer an intimate atmosphere, yet big enough to have everything all first-class ships should have.

All this is waiting for you when you're welcomed aboard for 43 magnificent days round-trip from San Francisco or Los Angeles. Or you can board in Honolulu for a 31-day round-trip cruise, with sailings one week later from California. Shorter air-sea combinations are also available, as your travel agent can tell you. Entertainment in London is still a bargain you won't $20 for everything from modern dance to classical find anywhere else.

Theatre in London is superb!

And why not? London's where William Shakespeare got his start. And since then every theatrical great has been eager to play the West End.

Right, now you rean see comedy, tragedy, historical drama, satire, stapstick, or glittering Theatre in London is more than just the play. It's luxury, sophistication, glamour, and elegance; all at affordable prices.

Most theatres are still done up in red plush and gilt: sumptuous and intimate boxes provide close-up views of the stage, cost from $15 to $30 depending on the number of seats, and put their patrons squarely in the public eye. And some theatres still have "gods" banks of seats climbing a dizzy angle high over the theatre where prices are downright cheap, often as low as $1.50.

Between the boxes and the "gods" you can choose from hundreds of good seats that cost anywhere from $2.50 to $10.00.

This is the time of year when London plays host to the world's finest ballet companies; and also fêtes Britain's own Royal Ballet. Tickets run from $2 to Music in London runs the gamut of opera, symphony, jazz, rock, and soul. And you can hear it in fine concert halls, local auditoriums, and even pubs.

Performances start early in London so make your supper a late one at The Ivy, Prunier's, Inigo Jones, or any of the good central restaurants where a midnight supper for two, with the house wine, will cost under $30.

Or you can take your pick of London's nightclubs. Choose the kind of entertainment you want: racey, offbeat, or a polished cabaret. Dinner and a show, or drinks and a show.

Perhaps you'll choose the combination so dear to British hearts: dinner and dancing with a floor show to round off the evening. A combination like that will cost you anywhere from $20 up to $60 at the better-known spots.

If you like your late nights late, ask the head porter at your hotel to suggest a club that serves breakfast to patrons who dance into the wee small hours. Then walk back to your hotel and watch the sun rise over Mayfair, turning its squares and mews a hazy pink and putting the final rosy touch to your night out on London town.

For instance, as a driver you can learn how to drive defensively. As a passenger you can avoid distracting the driver. And the government can insist upon higher initial driving qualifications and introduce periodic re-testing.

Crash injuries could be reduced if the driver always locks the car doors and insists that all passengers wear safe-ty belts. The government could insist on the use of seat belts in taxis also.

TORONTO, October 9th — Have you noticed how many people serve wine these days? One of my favourites is the cheery, cherry wine from Denmark . . . Cherry Kijafa (pronounced Kee-Yaffa). I've found that Cherry Kijafa, well chilled with a twist of lemoneel, makes a tempting aperitif. Or if you prefer a long drink, there are countless ways to serve it. . . with cola and ice; half and half with gin, vodka or rum; or perhaps with lime juice and soda. Pour a little Cherry Kijafa over fruit cups, grapefruit or ice cream and you have a delicious dessert. Cherry Kijafa is like a kiss from Denmark!

IF YOU'RE CONCERNED ABOUT CALORIES . . . but don't want to give up sweets . . . here are glad tidings! E. D. Smith's Diet Products not only satisfy your sweet tooth — but help you keep slim at the same time. E. D. Smith's maple-flavoured Diet Syrup and their 12 fruit spreads have only of all calories per teaspoon — compared to 16.6 calories in a teaspoon of regular pure jam. Good news, too, for diabetics . . . there's no sugar added to, any of them — so they're perfect for sugar-restricted diets. Try the Raspetry of Cherry flavours — you may never want to give them up!

MANY PEOPLE THINK of Dodd's Kidney Pills as a tried and trusted friend. After all, when they've had a sleepless night caused by a nagging back-ache, they ve found that with the help of Dodd's they'dsoon be sleeping normally and feeling chipper again. You see, back-aches are often the result of kidney irritation and when this is the cause, Dodd's Kidney Pills can help. Taken as directed, Dodd's relieves that irritated condition by gently stimulating kidney action. So you feel better—and rest better, too. Try Dodd's Kidney Pills . . . at all drug counters.

PENS IN YOUR HOUSEHOLD when one of the family has stomach cramps, nausea and diarrhea? If you are among the thousands of Canadians who have used DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY, then you know the answer. Pleasant-tasting Dr. Fowler's Extract is a non-constipating restorative formula, based on roots and herbs. It acts quickly to bring gentle relief to both children and adults from these uncomfortable symptoms, which are quite often caused by changes in food, water or even excitement. So why not do as so many Canadians have for over 100 years . . . keep Dr. Fowler's Extract on hand at all times.

The Wonderful World of Animals

DEAR DR. MILLER to the state of the day has acted very strangely. It usually happens during the brightest part of the day. He sits there with his mouth open and his wings halfway out, kind of dangling vulture-like.

I just walked into the room and there he'd be, doing that.

I thought maybe he was sunning himself the first time. because the sun was hitting his cage, but since he's done it when the sun wasn't. Is this just a little idiosyncrasy of his, or does it mean some-thing special?

DEAR W. J.: It could mean broiled bird. A few minutes exposure to the direct sun overheats that cage to the danger point. Even without the direct rays, the area could easily be too hot for safety. Your parakeet's own airconditioning system operates best when cooling if the beak is open and the wings are in the will ture like droop you've devulture-like droop you've described. Of course the answer to an overheated room is not to produce drafts, since this can cause dangerous chilling, but you should move the bird to a draft-free area which nonetheless does not become too hot.

DEAR DR: MILLER: Both of my cats have had a lot of trouble with ear mites in the last year. Just lately I've put flea collars on them. Then a friend said I should have done that a long time ago because it will cure the ear mites. Why do you suppose my own veterinarian didn't tell me that? All he said was my cats would keep picking up more ear mites as long as I fed the neighborhood cats on the back porch. By the way, if these flea collars get rid of ear mites, they'll keep the cats from picking up new mites, of ourse, too, won't them?-

DEAR G.N.: Your ve-terinarian didn't tell you feline flea collars will wipe out ear mite infestations because they won't. They are also comparatively ineffective in preventing initial ear mite

Any animal exposed to the sun should always have shade available and he able to shade available and be able to utilize it. The very young of many species couldn't man-age this.

DEAR DR. MINJER: This is the first year I have ever had fleas biting me, though I've had a few around, I guess. At least my dogs and cats have. I use flea collars and stuff, but there are always a few around anyway. always a few around anyway. This 'year there's even more than a few, or else I taste better, darn it. Can I either make my pets extra 'tasty' for the fleas, or make myself less so? I've been told Vitamin B1 is a flavor fleas don't like, and I've been taking plenty of that. I also take two cloves of garlic a day. I just started this campaign. Do you think know the answer by this time. Perhaps you are less popular at this point, though whether at this point, though whether fleas will have fled from your new-found flavor is questionable. Providing new tastes for the fleas is less effective than removing the fleas, with their appetites, entirely. Your quarters may currently be a breeding place for the critters, and it may require a professional exterminator along with a renewed fleafight directed by your veterinarian to cope with them.

HOW YOUN GASSIR

CAME OUT OF THE WEST As could be expected, sea-soned veterans walked away with the 1975 U.S. Chess Open, which took place in Lin-phone, which took place in Linoln, Nebraska, early this fall.

It was a banner year for New Jersey with its two sterling players, Pal Benko and william Lombardy, winning with ten points each out of a possible 12.

But every year has its surprises and this year's was provided by a 14-year-old unknown who hitchiked in from Seattle all unexpected arrive. Seattle, all unexpected, arriving one hour before play was to commence. Yassir Seirawan drew his first game and then began & devastating campaign — among his vic-tims was Grandmaster Arthur Bisguier — that threatened to place him in the very top ech-elon. That might well have happened had not Pal Bienko brought him low in the el-venth round.
